

Thun Nay Soe Uses His Gift for God in Myanmar

Executive Director Paul Maxfield has visited thousands upon thousands of children in his work with Children of Promise. Once in a while, you just come across a child that is very unique in some special way. That is true of Thun Nay Soe from Yangon, Myanmar.

Thun was born blind, but that has not slowed him down! Through Children of Promise, he has been able to attend the School for the Blind. "In school, we call ourselves peacemakers. We entertain in Kayin State and Mon State here in Myanmar. We use entertainment to promote peace with each other," explains Thun.

"When I spoke with Thun a couple of years ago during a visit, I asked him what he would really like to do with his life. He told me he wanted to be a Christian recording artist. So through special gifts, we were able to provide him with music training – voice and guitar classes," Paul Maxfield shares. "And he faithfully is using his talents for the Lord."

Nineteen-year-old Thun becomes more skilled with his voice and guitar playing as each year goes by. Just as he told Paul, becoming a recording artist singing for the Lord may be sooner than we think.

Enjoy his music. There is so much to celebrate when a child is sponsored!
